REGIONAL VETERINARY MANAGER

Location | Den Bosch (The Netherlands) with up to 30% international travelling

Position | In this role you are the driving force in ensuring and improving the swine health in our genetic nucleus and breeding populations. You make sure we comply with our own Topigs Norsvin health policy and standards. In addition, you provide adequate veterinary support towards the genetic dissemination process by developing and maintaining health certificates between exporting and importing countries in the region. You develop and maintain health, transport, and biosecurity protocols based on latest legislation and insights. Furthermore, you are responsible for the training and education of internal colleagues and external professionals, providing presentations for visitors and third parties, and supporting key accounts in the region. With our ambitious veterinary team we work daily on the perfection of our global health plan. You report to the Chief Veterinary Officer and you work closely with your colleagues in the Global Technical Services (GTS), local veterinarians in the region, supply chain, sales and production teams.

Your profile:

- Senior porcine veterinarian with minimum of 7 years of relevant work experience and a wide network in the international swine production and veterinary field.
- Thorough knowledge and interest of the porcine veterinary medicine. Knowledge of and experience with genetics and breeding programs is an advantage.
- Excellent communicator with good inter-cultural skills.
- Skills to manage different interests and the ability to work in an international setting with a quick and realistic understanding of issues.
- Oral and written fluency in English.

The offer | We welcome you in our energetic, enthusiastic and progressive company. You will work with passionate and experienced colleagues in an open and informal culture from our brand new modern office in den Bosch. Besides a decent set of compensation and benefits, we offer you a lot of opportunities to develop yourself and to grow your career. We jointly work on your personal development plan, including associated training and education and offering you work experiences you won't find anywhere else in the industry.
